1. The Voice of the Workingman is a weekly labor newspaper described as the personal monthpiece of Minister of Labor Eleftherics Gonis. Manager and treasurer is George Gerakanakis, a little known figure in journalistic circles, who supervises the offices of the newspaper at 6 Deligiorgi Street, Athens.

2. Each week an average of 40,0002 copies are printed at a cost of from 35-40,000,000 drachmae. A large part of the expenses is covered by subscriptions secured under pressure from Gomis from unions, factories, banks, organizations, and chambers of commerce. A factor in the great costs of the newspaper is that many reporters are employed at generous salaries.

Comment: Other reports give the name of this newspaper as I Effmeris ton Ergagomenon (The Newspaper of the Workers).

Comment: This large circulation figure is credible in view of stacks of unread copies of the Voice of the Workingman which have been observed in labor centers throughout Greece.
